UCLA receives $1 million to fund breast cancer research

UCLA has received a $1 million donation from Revlon to support the Revlon/UCLA Women's Cancer Research Program and continue UCLA's commitment to eradicate women's cancers. The gift was announced last month by Revlon chairman Ronald O. Perelman at an event honoring JCCC member Dr. Dennis Slamon (pictured above with Perelman, left, and Revlon CEO Fabian T. Garcia) and for his outstanding achievements in cancer research and the development of Herceptin. On hand to attend the star-studded event was Revlon global brand ambassador Halle Berry and breast cancer survivor Kara Dolce, who shared her inspiring success story.

Make cancer less scary

Hearing the words "You have cancer" is scary. At the JCCC, our researchers are working tirelessly to make those words less scary—by developing better ways to detect, treat and prevent cancer for the more than 4,600 people diagnosed with this disease every day. Will you help us? We can't make cancer less scary without YOU.
